

Are we going back to the roots?

man, AI, AI, AI... AI this, AI that, AI will make it easier, AI will make it faster, AI will learn from us, AI will teach us, AI is the future.

I am way beyond tired about this whole new technology and there have only been a couple of years since it has released to the public, fuck I spilt my tea after I wrote artificial intelligence so many times ha.

ever since it got released, I just knew that it was going to turn out really bad. everything that's pushed onto us and it's promoted everywhere as friendly, lifechanging and how easy it'll make our lives, you know it will be horrid.

I cannot even make a simple google search and look for some realistic or trusted articles without being hit with that fucking "GEMINI IS GOING TO SEARCH AND FIND YOU THE ANSWER". I DON'T WANT THAT, INTERNET ALREADY IS GIVING US 3 MILLION YEARS OF HISTORY, INFORMATION, SCIENCE AND WHATEVER THE FUCK, I JUST NEED TO SEARCH IT MYSELF. that's the fun of the internet, being able to navigate through tens and hundreds of pages, not a dumb gimmick to make me even slower and lazier than I already am! (I am already a professional procrastinator, I don't need more motivation for it cheers Microsoft and Google).

every company is investing all of their money and presenting their quick and smart usage of AI: "It analyzes databases in seconds! It creates anything that you might need!". Everything is profit and you will be left behind if you don't align with the present times. Well fuck AI, once and for all.

from talking to robots in customer service when my order was wrong to the internet not working all the way to "helping" while you're designing something and AI will only give it a polish.

dead internet theory? oh you mean social media in 2026? the whole internet is filled with AI bots and they are controlled by whoever has the money to do so. there are not even weird garages filled with people creating fake accounts, AI just does it on an instant.

"ok but people are paying a lot of money to use it and innovate". ok fuck money you know what other resources it takes? land and water, lots of it actually. unfortunately, there aren't many big articles about the negative impact so here's a quick one.

besides the fact that we won't have natural potable water, it makes us stupid. people are asking any ridiculous question to chatgpt. man, ask your friends that shit, I would rather hear the dumbest solution to a problem that is going to make everything worse rather than what a robot fed with all the data in history has to say.

it slows our thinking (if not, deleting it), making it reliable and ready for us 24/7.

like it wasn't enough that tiktok and reels washed and destroyed the whole planet's brain, now we have to deal with a so called "servant" that thinks and does everything for us. plans trips (absolutely insane), gives you therapy advice, relationship advice, career advice.

for example, in Videodrome, Debbie Harry's character has a small monologue where she presents those present times as being "overstimulated". what did they had in the '80s? cocaine was new, a lot of concerts, movies and videos were on the rise, disco music, internet and phone lines were being created or developed. if 40 years ago the humanity was already overstimulated, what should we call ourselves now?

one of the most heartbreaking moments for me it was when I was commuting home from work and I peeped into somebody's phone (it's wrong I know but it's so fun, and if you want people not to see what you're doing you're going to at least try to hide it and make it more personal, right? not really i'm just a drama loving individual and this behaviour is intolerable) and they were writing a love message with chatgpt and sending it to their partner. terrible man, absolutely outrageous, it was not enough that most of the people are not communicating, now they use AI to create a false narrative about their feelings. what is even real left on this world?

talking about bots, they are present on dating apps too. so if you need help, you will be discussing with an unknown entity that gives you the most useless advices there is, if you are looking for a partner or even a soulmate, you will be living the movie Her (outstanding performance and cinematography). what is going to be real anymore? are we just going to consume technology until we implode? dare I say that there are ghost influencers or OnlyFans content creators? are they really switching up withing the adult content too? is that possible? people are being too blindfolded.

not to mention the most infuriating aspect for me, "AI" art. either if we are talking about music, poems, paintings, movies, games or anything that has human spirit. art is based on motive, reasoning, experiences, emotions, humanity. art cannot exist without being entirely made and created by a human. everything "art" related that is being created in the absence of humanity, you just feel it. soulless music, content.

this is where I think the shift will be made.

people will get tired of discussing with nobody, interacting with ghosts and being studied 24/7 by every single app who is trying to steal our hard-working extremely-taxed money. we will go back to the roots, to the eras that we all idolatrize.

big tech corps or weird over-the-head-enthusiasts about AI will tell you with their heart out that in some time AI will be so real you won't be able to tell what's fake anymore. exactly my point, we will get used to soulless interactions and will be able to detect these ghostly interactions. we will get sick of it and maybe not tomorrow or next year, but we will switch back to the old roots.

we will lose the phones, we will go out more, we will be craving for human interaction like we never did before. those 5-10 seconds video already altered our brains, gave us anxiety for generations to come and created new fears or diseases that never existed before. every distressed champagne will have to pop eventually, no matter how good the cap has been sealed.

humans need humans to live, not technology, not AI, no ghosts, real human validation and inspiration. we live off ideas that come at us while admiring clouds during July while on a melancholy hill with a random stranger you met on busy Thursday night coming home from the mandatory bowling night. that's the one who is going to hold onto you on your darkest hours, who will give you 100 times the comfort your overpriced mattress is going to. you'll hear a real lullaby in your ear while having constant goosebumps for 10 minutes straight.

you will share 10 negronis and 4 mocktails aimed at your friends who are undergoing medical treatments, which you will tell very convinced that "hey some drinks won't ruin the antibiotics destroying your intestinal flora!", all while having the tone of a doctor with 20 years in the hospital.

life is beautiful. indeed it has its miserable parts but it's part of life, right? we need hope to move on and.. hope for the better. i'm not okay but i'm gonna be alright.
